A message from the Director….

Cat Kelly
State Public Defender

Each morning in classrooms and assembly halls across this state and nation, Americans rise to pledge allegiance to their flag and country*, "with liberty and justice for all."* It was the quest for those twin values that gave birth to our nation over two hundred years ago and today, we continue to honor them as the defining characteristics of our nation.

Liberty and justice for all. Not just for those who have money. Not just for those who are influential in their communities. All.

"Governments, both state and federal, quite properly spend vast sums of money to establish machinery to try defendants accused of crime. Lawyers to prosecute are everywhere deemed essential to protect the public's interest in an orderly society….

That government hires lawyers to prosecute and defendants who have the money hire lawyers to defend are the strongest indications that lawyers in criminal courts are necessities, not luxuries.

The right of one charged with crime to counsel may not be deemed fundamental and essential to fair trials in some countries, but it is in ours….

This noble ideal cannot be realized if the poor man charged with crime has to face his accusers without a lawyer to assist him."

Justice William O. Douglas
Argersinger v Hamlin
407 US 25 (1972).

This is the essence of what public defense is about. Every day, in every courthouse in every county of our state, Missouri's public defenders show up to defend the liberties of their fellow Missourians. We stand beside those who lack the means to hire an attorney, to defend them against the accusations made against them, and in the process we ensure that our justice system lives up to its name.

Public defenders investigate the case for the defense and re-investigate the case the state claims it has against those accused. Sometimes the defenders uncover evidence that things are not at all what the state believed or claimed. Sometimes they uncover evidence that there is more to the story than the police or prosecutors knew and the situation is in fact very different than assumed. And sometimes the defense investigation confirms that the state got it right, that the defendant did cross the line and has justly been brought before the court. Then our job is to figure out why and what would best ensure that this person gets back on the right track and does not harm society further by re-offending. Mental illness and developmental disabilities, substance abuse and addiction, homelessness or other dire economic circumstances, lack of education or job skills – any of these may be among the mix that influenced a particular defendant to violate the law.

A recent study showed that 70% of the new admissions to Missouri's Department of Corrections are repeat offenders, driving up both the population and the costs of corrections astronomically. Research also verifies that development and use of defendant-specific sentencing plans that identify and address the circumstances that led that particular individual into criminal activity in the first place are key in saving the state the cost of repeat incarcerations and in protecting the public from continued criminal activity. That is smart, it is just, and it is what public defenders bring to the table in courtrooms across the state. This is the very real value that public defenders provide to all Missourians, each and every day.

Liberty and justice. That's what it's all about.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Who We Are & What We Do…

What is the Missouri Public Defender System?

The Missouri State Public Defender System [MSPD] is a statewide system, providing direct representation to over 98% of the indigent defendants accused of state crimes in Missouri's trial, appellate, and Supreme courts. It is an independent department of state government, located within, but not supervised by, the judicial branch. Instead, it is governed by a seven-member Public Defender Commission, each of whom is appointed by the governor. Commissioners serve staggered six year terms and no more than four may be of the same political party. The Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, Cathy R. Kelly, is appointed by the Public Defender Commission.

Who qualifies for a public defender?

The Public Defender Commission sets indigence guidelines, which are used to determine who is eligible for public defender services. Currently, those guidelines match the Federal Poverty Guidelines. Strictly applied, that would mean an individual making only $11,000 a year would not qualify for a public defender. According to recent reports, Missouri ranks 50th out of 50 states in income eligibility standards for public defender services, leaving a wide gap of ineligible defendants who, in reality, still lack the means to retain private counsel in the market. Defendants have the right to appeal MSPD's denial of their application to the court for an independent review of their eligibility. If the court finds they are unable to afford private counsel, the court can overrule the public defender denial.

Who works for MSPD?

MSPD employs 585 employees, 376 of whom are attorneys. All attorneys employed by MSPD are prohibited from practicing law other than on behalf of clients of MSPD. The department is divided into a Trial Division, an Appellate/Post-Conviction Division and a Capital Division, each of which is described in greater detail in a on pages. XX, XX and XX, respectively.

Non-attorney district office staff is made up of investigators, capital mitigation specialists, paralegals, legal assistants and clerks. An operations staff provides centralized information technology support, fiscal, and human resources services for the 44 district offices located around the state, as well as managing MSPD's contracting of conflict cases to private counsel described in greater detail on page XX.

Mission Statement

The mission of the Missouri State Public Defender System is to provide high quality, zealous advocacy for indigent people who are accused of crime in the State of Missouri.

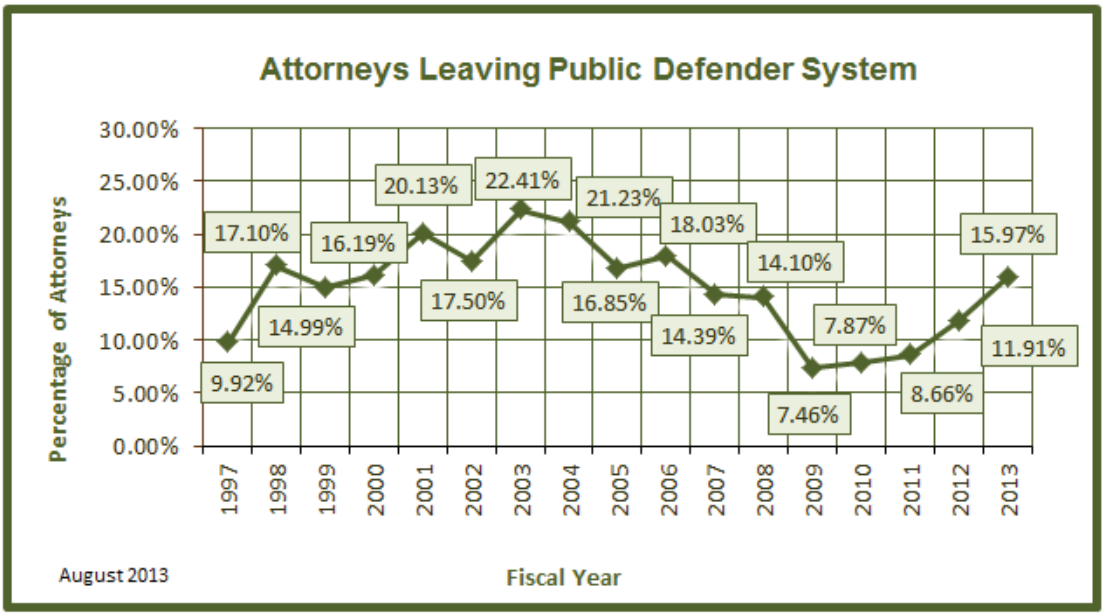
Providing effective assistance of counsel in each case demands a well-trained, highly experienced corps of dedicated attorneys and support staff. High turnover makes this difficult, if not impossible, to provide. After MSPD began hitting turnover rates of 20-22% in the mid-2000's, repositioning salary adjustments were enacted to bring salaries to the levels shown above. The fact that just these small changes were enough to make MSPD's attorney turnover drop several significant percentage points -- though still among the highest turnover classifications in state government – is proof that most public defenders do want to remain in public service if at all possible. However, staggering student debt loans ($60,000—$200,000) make it extremely difficult for even those who are passionate about public interest employment to work for MSPD, make their loan payments, and provide for themselves and their families.



The recession that hit in 2008 was actually much more effective in reducing attorney turnover. Private law firms stopped hiring and senior attorneys on the verge of setting up their own private practice put plans on hold, given the state of the economy. The combination gave MSPD a temporary reprieve from the revolving door, dropping turnover as low as 7.5%, but it was only temporary. The underlying factors that have perennially caused high attorney turnover have not been resolved -- Missouri's public defenders still struggle with staggering student loan debt and still are paid less than what their counterparts in criminal justice are receiving. Caseloads are still overwhelming and lawyers still enjoy no immunity from either civil liability or disciplinary action for their failures to handle that caseload effectively, no matter how impossible that task might be. In FY12, the turnover rate jumped back up to 12% and in FY13 attorney turnover increased to almost 16%.

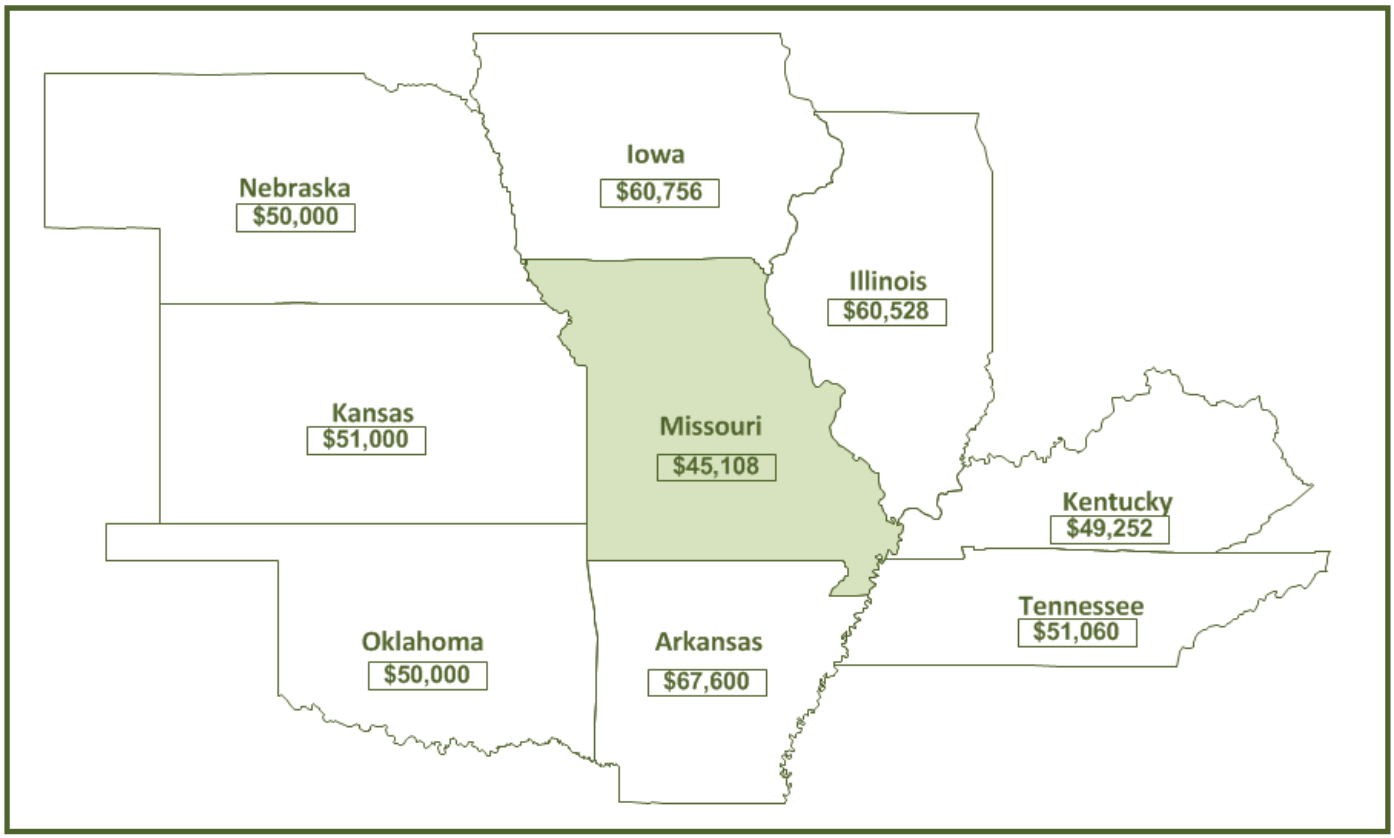
Missouri public defenders lag behind not only other Missouri lawyers, but also public defenders in surrounding states. In March of 2006, the Personnel Advisory Board of the Office of Administration reviewed the salaries of the Missouri Assistant Public Defenders. Their summary stated: "The minimum of the pay range for the Missouri Assistant Public Defender II is 14% behind the minimum for employees in similar jobs in other states. The midpoint is 18% behind and the maximum is 23% behind." As the map below illustrates, these discrepancies have not improved in the last seven years.



Public Defender Appropriations

General Revenue: Missouri State Public Defender (MSPD) funding is almost entirely from state general revenue. It comes in three appropriations:

Personal Service: Used to pay the salaries of all MSPD employees.

Expense & Equipment: Used to pay the overhead costs of operations, such as office supplies and equipment, employee travel expenses, and rent and utilities for the statewide offices.

Litigation & Contracting Expenses: Used to pay the cost of contracting cases out to private counsel and litigation expenses on both MSPD cases and those cases contracted out to private counsel. Litigation expenses include the cost of experts, depositions, transcripts, exhibits, independent testing of evidence, etc.

Legal Defense and Defender Fund: This appropriation is not money given to MSPD but the authorization to spend money collected by MSPD up to the ceiling of the appropriation. The collections associated with fund are the result of Section 600.090 RSMo, which requires public defenders to assess liens against the clients receiving public defender service. Payments made on those liens are deposited into the Legal Defense and Defender Fund and used to fund all public defender training as well as pay for such miscellaneous expenditures as computer lines, WestLaw, bar dues for the system's 370 attorneys, etc. In FY13 MSPD collected $1.179 million through lien repayments.

The personal service component of the LDDF appropriation authorizes MSPD to pay the salaries of two employees, the system's Director of Training and the Training Assistant, out of the lien moneys collected rather than through the general revenue personal service appropriation.

Debt Offset Escrow Fund: This again, is not an appropriation of actual money, but an authorization for MSPD to collect funds through the state's debt offset program. Under this program, taxpayers due a refund of state income tax who owe a debt to the state may have their refund intercepted and used to pay down the debt instead. MSPD participates in this program to collect payments on the liens described above. The money collected through this program is not in addition to the LDDF collections, but a subset thereof.

Grants: Another 'permission' appropriation, rather than actual money appropriation, this authorizes MSPD to collect up to $125,000 in grants from the federal government or other sources. The last time MSPD collected a federal grant was in the mid-1990's to help begin an Alternative Sentencing Program of social workers to develop client-specific sentencing plans as a way to reduce recidivism. That program proved successful and was picked up and funded by the state after the federal grant expired. Unfortunately, the growing caseload crisis and attorney shortage this past decade required MSPD to dismantle the program in order to turn the social worker FTE into more attorney positions.

Actual Funding: In all, in FY13, MSPD received a total of $37.499 million from the combination of general revenue ($36.321M) and actual collections under the LDDF program ($1.178M).

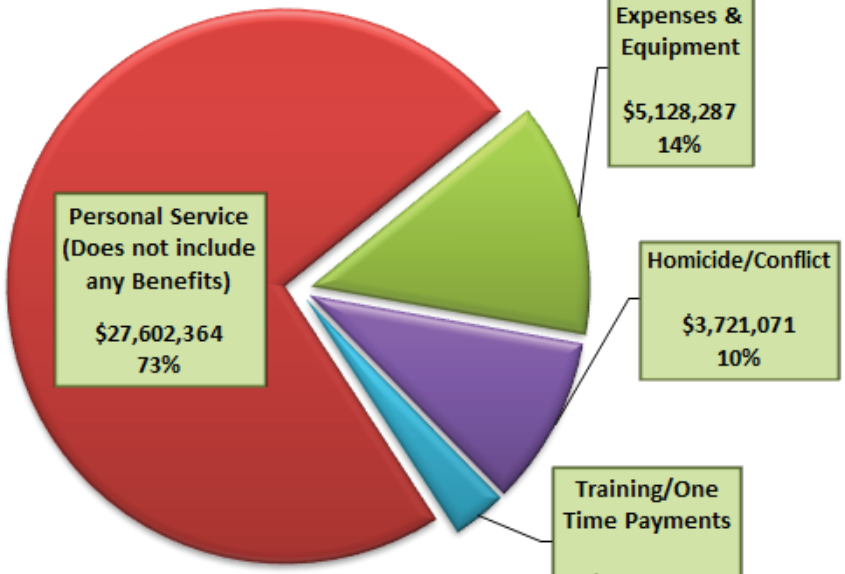
FY13 Public Defender Expenditures



Collections from clients for the indigent defense services provided to them are generally collected through two revenue streams. Approximately 40% of collections comes through state income tax refund intercepts by the Department of Revenue. The remainder is generally collected by courts who collect payments of the Public Defender fees along with court costs at the close of a case. As the chart reflects, collections overall have steadily declined since the onset of the latest recession, which has of course negatively impacted revenues across the board, both within Missouri and across the nation.

Nonetheless, this past fiscal year MSPD aggressively explored options for improving collections. Actions adopted and soon to be implemented include improved district office communication with clients re the debts owed and accepting debit and credit card payments via both the internet and telephone.

Retention of a collection agency to pursue collection remedies against clients with outstanding judgments was also explored, but proved to be much less tenable. $20.5 million of the outstanding debt owed to MSPD is due from former MSPD clients who are currently incarcerated in the Missouri Department of Corrections. No collections agency was even willing to explore the possibility of collections activities against those individuals. Excluding the incarcerated debtors still left approximately 252,000 unincarcerated individuals with outstanding debts to MSPD and MSPD spent several months in meetings and conversation with collections entities exploring collections actions against these individuals. At the end of the process, however, the unanimous conclusion of all ten or so collection entities contacted in this process was that attempting legal collections efforts against this population -- those at or below the federal poverty level at the time of representation and most with criminal convictions hampering still further any future employment opportunities -- would inevitably wind up costing significantly more than it would return. Not one was willing to undertake the project, even on a trial basis. With only two clerks handling all of the accounts payable and receivable for MSPD, pursing more aggressive collections efforts in-house is simply not an option; nor, according to the private industry experts, is it likely to be profitable for the state in the long run.

Time-Keeping

On March 1, 2013, MSPD employees began recording their time according to task and case type. While public defender time-keeping had been instituted once before, in 2006, as part of a twelve-week workload study, this new time-keeping approach is not a one-time study, but a permanent change in MSPD's way of doing business. Employee time-logs are kept in five-minute increments and completed by all MSPD employees, not just attorneys.

The time-keeping program in use was designed to allow MSPD management to expand or collapse the number of categories and tasks tracked. This flexibility permits the periodic collection of much more detailed data for use in workload studies or tracking a particular issue of concern, while also permitting the collapse of multiple tasks into simpler-to-use broader categories for the ongoing tracking of time.

Initial data from the new time-keeping system reveals the following breakdown of attorney time within the Public Defender System:

Attorney Tasks	% of Time per task
Administrative Tasks	11.95%
Clerical	6.38%
Client/Family	16.17%
Fact Finding	12.02%

Legal Research & Writing	6.97%

Missouri Public Defenders:
Trial Division

These are the trial lawyers, the ones Missouri's indigent defendants first turn to upon being arrested and charged with a crime. The lawyers usually enter on their cases at or soon after a defendant's first appearance in associate circuit court following an arrest and will continue representing the defendant through the entire associate and circuit court process – up to and including the plea or trial and, if convicted, the sentencing hearing. The division consists of 34 district trial offices, as well as the Civil Commitment Defense Unit [CDU]. Between them, they handle 95.5% of the cases that make up the system's caseload.

MSPD's Trial Division attorneys handle every type of state criminal case in which the law includes a possible jail sentence among the penalty options for the court to consider -- from traffic offenses, conservation, and 'Minor in Possession of Alcohol' offenses up to and including non-capital murder cases. (Capital Murder cases are handled by the MSPD Capital Division.) The Trial Division also handles civil commitment proceedings under the sexually violent predator statutes and petitions for release from the Department of Mental Health, both of which are discussed further below.

An MSPD Trial Division Attorney's practice will generally include:

- bond hearings for those defendants who are confined pre-trial and seeking release, which can include verifying a place to stay, finding a sponsor the court is likely to trust, verifying an employer will take them back to work, etc;
- preliminary hearings;
- tracking down and reviewing all of the state's discovery – police reports, lab reports, witness statements, hospital records, etc.;
- interviewing or deposing the key state's witnesses;
- locating and interviewing potential defense witnesses;
- tracking down records and evidence that may help establish the defendant's innocence;
- visiting crime scenes or re-enacting a described crime to see if the real thing matches up with what witnesses described;
- reviewing the results and original notes and data from forensic tests conducted by the state, determining whether an independent analysis by an expert who doesn't work for the state is warranted, and if so, finding that expert and arranging for the testing of the evidence;
- making initial assessments of the defendant's ability to understand the legal proceedings and, when the defendant exhibits developmental or mental disabilities, arranging for an expert to evaluate the defendant to make that determination;
- researching the law applicable to the defendant's case and litigating motions where it appears the defendant has not been properly charged, the law has not been followed, or the state is seeking to put on evidence of questionable admissibility or reliability;
- negotiating plea agreements with the prosecutor, as well as locating and litigating for sentencing options that could effectively address the problems that resulted in the defendant getting into trouble in the first place and thus reduce the likelihood of recidivism; or

- if the case is one that goes to a trial, conducting that trial, before either a judge or jury, as well as being present and advising the client concerning all the court appearances a defendant will be required to make as his case progresses through the criminal justice system;
- and of course meeting with and advising the client, and perhaps the client's family members if the client requests it, throughout each of the above processes.

As the above list indicates, an attorney's appearance in court on behalf of a defendant is a very small portion of the work they must do on a case. When they have too many cases, some of these steps are skipped or fall by the way side. The state's evidence is taken at face value, assumed by all to be accurate and mistakes fall through the cracks, uncaught and uncorrected. The result is that individual defendants and justice as a whole suffer.

Types of Cases Handled by the Trial Division

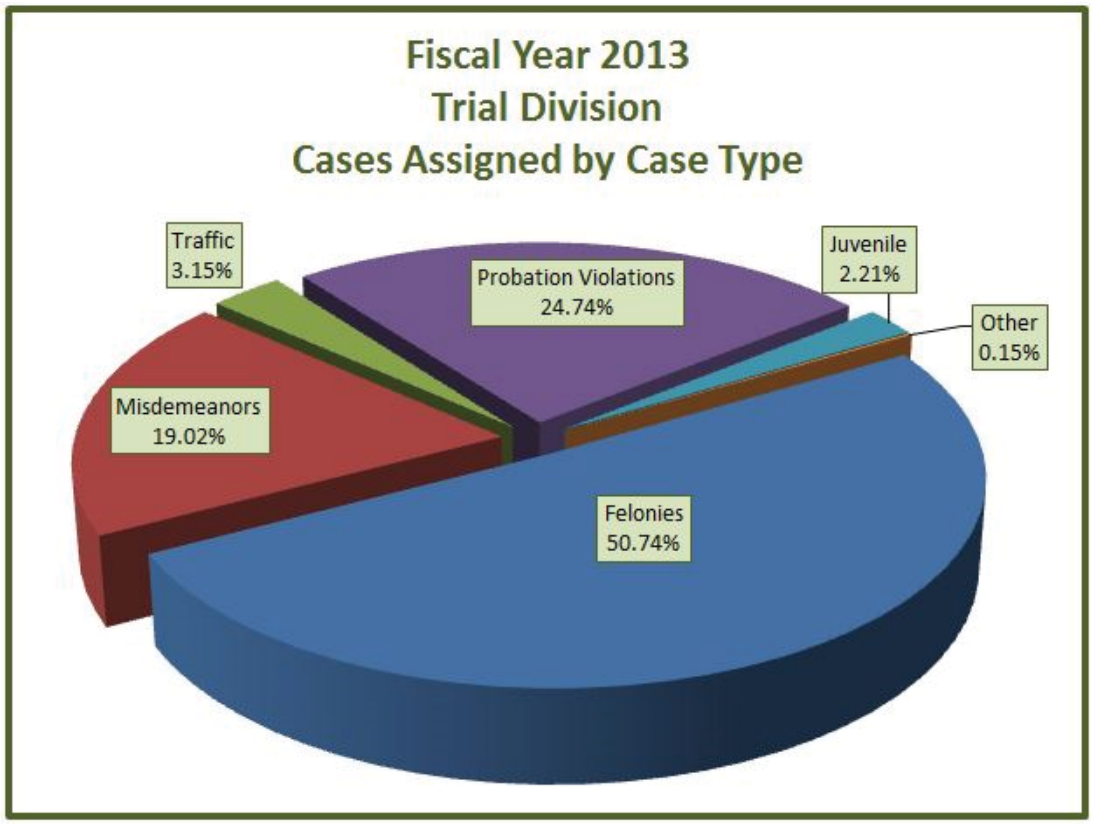
FELONY OFFENSES: As the pie chart on the following page shows, 50.74% of the Trial Division caseload in FY13 was made up of felony offenses. These are charges which carry penitentiary time, ranging from one to four years of imprisonment for the lowest level felonies up to life in prison without the possibility of probation or parole for the most serious offenses.

MISDEMEANOR OFFENSES: Misdemeanor offenses are those which carry jail time as a possible sentence, but any jail time imposed would be served in the county jail rather than the state's penitentiary. The maximum sentence on the highest level misdemeanor offenses is one year incarceration.

JUVENILE CASES: Missouri's juvenile courts have jurisdiction over anyone under the age of 17 who is accused of committing an offense that would be a crime if that person were an adult. They also have jurisdiction over various 'status offenses' – things that apply only to juveniles and not to adults. Examples of these would be Truancy and Incorrigibility. Some Missouri courts appoint private attorneys for juveniles who cannot hire their own attorneys, but a number of counties, particularly those in the urban areas with more significant juvenile caseloads, continue to rely on the public defender to provide defense representation to these children.

PROBATION VIOLATION CASES: These are cases in which the defendant has already been through the court system on an underlying charge and placed on probation. The new case arises from the allegation that the defendant has in some way violated the conditions of his/her probation. Violations can arise from new criminal behavior, whether or not any criminal charges were filed; so an arrest alone can be grounds for a probation violation. A defendant may also face a violation proceeding for what are known as technical violations, which are violations of conditions put in place at the time of the probation. These can include such things as failing a drug test, failure to report to the probation officer as instructed, failure to complete an ordered treatment or education program, etc.

PETITIONS FOR RELEASE: Another type of civil commitment in which public defender is involved are those following a finding of Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity [NGRI]. A defendant found to be NGRI is automatically committed to the Department of Mental Health for treatment. Petitions for Release are the requests by those so committed to now be released from the Department of Mental Health. Some who have already been released from the mental institution on a conditional release are asking to be unconditionally released, free of the ongoing supervision and conditions of the Department of Mental Health. The issue in both such petitions is whether the defendant's mental illness is sufficiently under control that he or she no longer poses a threat to themselves or to others. Unlike the SVP commitments discussed above, these petitions are litigated before a judge, rather than a jury.



FAQ: Why does MSPD count probation violations as separate cases when the courts and prosecutors do not?

It is the practice of Missouri's prosecutors and courts to hold open the original case out of which probation arose, for the duration of the probationary period. As a result, they then treat probation violations as simply another proceeding within the original case.

By contrast, it is the practice of MSPD and the defense bar as whole to close out a case once the defendant is placed on probation. Neither group of defense attorneys, private or public, is willing or able to commit to continuing to represent, counsel, or maintain contact with that client over the course of his / her probation (which on a felony case can last up to five years) as would be ethically required of them as defense counsel if they maintained these as open cases for the duration of the probationary period.

If a probation violation is later filed, private defense attorneys generally expect a separate retainer in order to represent the defendant on that probation violation. This is why MSPD winds up with many probation violation cases in which the defendant had private counsel on the underlying charge. The defendant cannot come up with the additional money to pay the private attorney to handle the new probation violation matter. By the same token, MSPD is seldom in a position to re-assign to the defendant the same attorney who handled the underlying charge in his case. In either situation, therefore, a new attorney-client relationship must be established just as in any other new case.

The evidence of violation is gathered and reported to the court and prosecutor by the probation officer. The review of that evidence, investigation of its accuracy, the review of the law that applies to the circumstances of this revocation proceeding and the investigation into and presentation to the judge of other sentencing alternatives in lieu of revocation is the obligation of defense counsel. If done correctly, this is very comparable to the work that is required in any other criminal case and therefore MSPD counts it as a case in its own right.

COUNTY VS CIRCUIT SYSTEMS

Missouri's 34 trial offices provide defense representation to indigent defendants in all of Missouri's 114 counties plus the City of St. Louis. Some of the urban offices serve only one county, but most of the offices serving rural counties are responsible for several counties. The office with the largest geographic spread is District 43, located in Chillicothe, which serves eleven counties. Most offices, however, cover between three and five counties.

Currently, the geographic areas covered by defender offices do not coincide with Missouri's judicial circuits, even though the district numbers assigned to each office will often be the same as that of one of the judicial circuits the office serves. For example, one public defender office may serve only two of the three counties in a particular judicial circuit, while also providing service in two counties from an adjoining judicial circuit.

This arrangement will be changing as the result of legislation enacted in the Spring of 2013. HB215 requires that the Missouri Public Defender Commission, which is responsible for determining where public defender offices are established and their boundaries of service, begin the move toward making public defender districts congruent with judicial circuits. A plan for implementing that change is due to the legislature by December 31 of 2015 and final implementation of the revised districts is to be completed by December 31, 2018. Under the legislation, one district office may serve more than one judicial circuit, but circuits may not be split between more than one district office.

MSPD tracks both assigned and disposed of cases for each fiscal year, and both of those numbers for FY2013 can be found within this Annual Report. However, those two numbers are generally not tracking the same cases. Many cases take more than a year from assignment to disposition and many more do not fall neatly, start to finish, within a single fiscal year. The below chart reflects the reality that no lawyer begins the fiscal year with an empty file drawer. At the start of FY2013, Missouri's public defenders had over 29,000 pending cases already on their desks, to which another 73,666 new cases were assigned over the course of the fiscal year.

Public Defender
Appellate/Post Conviction Relief Division

MSPD's Appellate/PCR Division consists of six offices, with two offices located in St. Louis, two in Columbia, and two in Kansas City. In St. Louis and Kansas City, both offices do both appeals and PCR's and handle conflict cases for one another. Having a second office down the hall avoids having to transfer conflict cases to an attorney on the other side of the state. In Columbia, one office handles exclusively appeals and the other office handles exclusively post-conviction cases.

Appeals: Direct appeals are the first step in seeking to set aside or overturn a conviction after a trial. The process involves asking the Court of Appeals and /or the Missouri Supreme Court, to review and grant relief because of mistakes made by the trial court. The attorneys review the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents , and evidence introduced in the case and then present to the appellate courts, through written briefs and oral argument, the errors that were made in the lower court and the law supporting relief. MSPD's appellate attorneys handle cases in the Eastern, Western, and Southern Courts of Appeal and in both the Missouri and U.S. Supreme Court.

Post-conviction Cases: Post-Conviction cases (or PCR's) are collateral attacks on a conviction after the appellate process has been exhausted, and can include challenges to the legitimacy of the appellate process in a case as well as of the trial court proceedings. Unlike an appeal, which can only follow a trial, a PCR can also be filed after a guilty plea. These proceedings are conducted in the circuit courts in all 114 counties across the state + the City of St. Louis and include capital as well as non-capital cases.

In a post-conviction case, the focus is on constitutional violations that could not be corrected at the appellate level. E.g, if an attorney fails to object at the right time at a trial, the trial court's mistake is not preserved for appeal and the appellate court will usually not review it. However, through a PCR proceeding , a court can examine the attorney's failure to make the right objection and the likelihood the defendant would have gotten relief on appeal had the attorney done it correctly. If the court in the PCR hearing finds that, but for the attorney's ineffectiveness, the defendant likely would have had a different result, relief may be granted.

Attorneys handling PCR cases must do much of the same work as their appellate counterparts -- reviewing the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents , and evidence introduced in the case; but instead of then writing briefs and doing oral arguments for the appellate court, they draft motions to set aside the conviction and conduct evidentiary hearings at the circuit court level. To prepare for these, the PCR attorneys must figure out what the trial attorney should have done, but didn't, and then do it themselves. This can include a fair amount of case re-investigation, such as locating and presenting witnesses the trial attorney failed to locate or present, presenting the testimony of an expert the trial attorney failed to obtain, or putting on new evidence of innocence that was never provided by the state prior to trial. If a post-conviction claim is denied at the lower court level, there is a right to an appeal of that denial.

Private Attorney Cases: In addition to the direct appeals and post-conviction matters arising out of cases initially handled at the trial level by public defenders, our Appellate/PCR attorneys get many cases from the private bar. It is frequently the case that the money to pay counsel has run out by the time a trial is complete and the appellate and post-conviction processes therefore fall back to the public defender.

Missouri Public Defenders
Capital Division

MSPD's Capital Division provides defense representation in Murder First Degree cases in which the state is seeking the death penalty. They also handle direct appeals in cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed. If their caseloads permit, they may occasionally also take on a non-capital murder case from an overloaded trial office.

The division consists of three offices, one in St. Louis, one in Columbia, and one in Kansas City. Because of the complexity of death penalty cases, attorneys handling capital cases are limited to no more than six open capital cases at a time. Two attorneys, an investigator, and a mitigation specialist are assigned to each case.

Missouri Public Defenders
Commitment Defense Unit

MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit was created 2003 in response to Missouri's adoption of new 'Sexually Violent Predator' civil commitment laws. After a person convicted of certain sexual offenses has completed his prison sentence, the state may seek to have him adjudicated as a 'sexually violent predator' and have him civilly committed to the state's Sex Offender Rehabilitation and Treatment Services institution. The public defenders working in MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit [CDU] provide defense representation to these defendants during both their initial commitment hearing and jury trial and thereafter, at a new jury trial every year for each inmate to determine whether he or she remains a danger to the community.

At the time this program was created, MSPD received two additional attorneys to handle the anticipated increase in workload from these new commitment proceedings. Today, MSPD has had to pull three more lawyers from the overloaded Trial Division to help handle the growing CDU caseload.

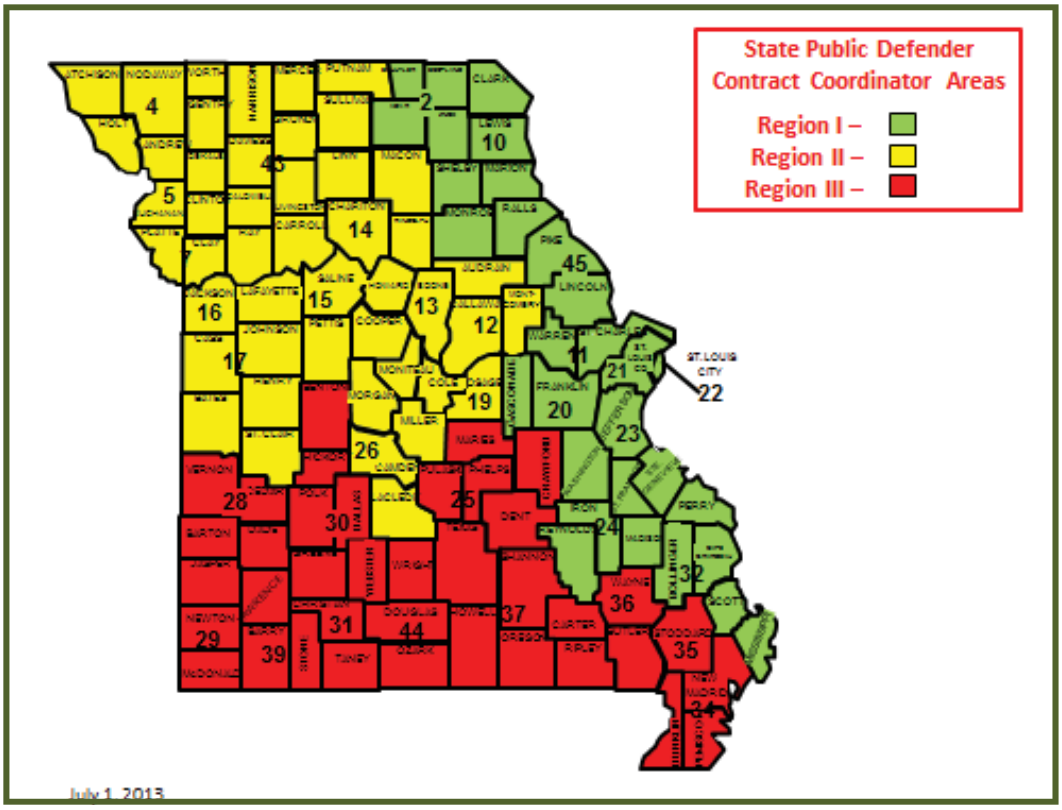
Missouri Public Contract & Conflict Assignments

Administration of Contracting:

MSPD contracts with three experienced private criminal defense attorneys to administer the case contracting function within designated regions, as shown in the map below. The MSPD Deputy Director administers the contracting of cases in the Northwest Region of the state, as well as overseeing the work of the Contract Coordinators and the contracting function as a whole.



Dan Gralike

Deputy Director

Each Contract Coordinator is responsible for recruiting and qualifying private attorneys within their designated regions to serve as MSPD Panel Attorneys – private criminal defense attorneys who accept cases on contract for MSPD. As cases to be contracted are identified, they are forwarded to the appropriate Contract Coordinator, who assigns the case to an appropriately-qualified attorney from the pool of Panel Attorneys for a particular county. By spreading among four people, the responsibility that was previously handled by only one, MSPD has significantly reduced the amount of time it is taking to get private attorneys assigned to contract cases without adding any additional administrative staff.

Types of Cases Contracted

MSPD contracts out two kinds of cases: 1) those which are a conflict for the local public defender office to handle; and 2) caseload relief contracts. The contracting process is the same for both. Only the reasons for the contracting differ.

Conflicts Cases: Conflict cases are those in which the lawyers or staff of the local public defender office have a conflict of interest in representing the defendant. This is most often because the office already represents a co-defendant with opposing interests or may have previously represented the person who is now the victim or a key witness in this new case. Occasionally the conflict is because the victim is a friend or family member of someone in the office. Under the Rules of Professional Responsibility governing attorney practice, lawyers are not permitted to accept representation in cases that present a conflict of interest. As a result, these cases must go elsewhere.

The majority of conflict cases are assigned to a different, geographically close public defender office. Sometimes, however, there are not enough nearby offices to go around, as is often the in cases involving multiple co-defendants. Often, it is neither feasible nor efficient to assign conflicts to another defender office, which necessitates an attorney traveling to another county for just one case or to see one client. In still other situations, the office that would normally be assigned a conflict case is especially short-staffed or overloaded and unable to take on the additional cases. In these situations, the conflict cases are contracted out to private counsel.

Caseload Relief Contracts: As has already been described, MSPD is suffering from a system-wide caseload crisis. One attempt to address this critical problem has been through the contracting of some of the case overload in especially critical jurisdictions out to the private bar.

Fee Schedule for Contracting

MSPD utilizes a modified flat fee rate for contract cases. This is a base fee corresponding to the type of case with provisions for additional payment if the case should go to trial. The base fee may also be negotiated upward if the case is a particularly complex one or has special circumstances that may require work above and beyond the norm for its case type or if we are unable to locate a qualified attorney who will take the case at the rate on the schedule, as does sometimes happen. The typical contract fee schedule used by MSPD in FY13 is to the right.

Bench Trial - $750 per day prorated

Litigation expenses (expert witness fees and travel costs, depositions, transcripts, case investigation, etc) are not included in the attorney's fee. Those types of expenditures are approved separately and must each be submitted to MSPD for approval by MSPD's Deputy Director prior to being incurred.

In FY13, MSPD contracted approximately 3.35% of its total caseload to the private bar. In FY07 and FY08, MSPD was given $1.15 million to contract out case overload to private counsel, but in FY09, that amount was reduced to fund twelve new FTE and the contracting of case overload was cut back accordingly. The FY13 appropriations included an extra $1.163 million in contracting funds for caseload relief for MSPD. , $441,941 of which was immediately released by the Governor. The remaining $721,071 was released in later April 2013

In FY13, MSPD spent just over $2,238,357 to contract out 2,614 cases, at an average cost per case of $856.30.
